

Julia Katherine Levine, our Lead Research Advocate and Publications Curator is a metastatic breast cancer survivor and a founding member of LBCA. She is committed to advocating, researching and educating patients, clinicians and others about lobular breast cancer and in particular, metastatic lobular breast cancer. She has created and presented an educational webinar on metastatic ILC for the Komen Metastatic Breast Cancer conferences. She has been a co-author and patient advocate on ILC studies and posters, liasons with LBCA metastatic partner organizations and mentors fellow lobular and metastatic patients.

She enjoys meeting and working with researchers and clinicians and her experience as a metastatic patient gives her a unique perspective with which to try to help facilitate advances in both metastatic breast cancer and lobular research.
