Invasive lobular carcinoma (ILC) and ductal carcinoma (IDC) are two subtypes of breast cancer. ILC is a special subtype characterized by its distinct clinical and prognostic features. IDC is the more common subtype, accounting for 10-15% of cases. Both subtypes are important to distinguish for treatment and outcome.

5. Seer.org
9. info@lobularbreastcancer.org